

HIS DAUGHTER WAS TAKEN AWAY

Lover Abducts Girl While Parents Were Away From Home Last Sunday

FATHER TELLS THE STORY

Says His Seventeen Year Old Daughter Has Driven Him to Hard Drink

The McFeeleys and the Cochrels are like the mountain folks Opie Reid spoke of here last Sunday: there is always a strife bordering on a feud existing between them; talk of hatred is intermingled with the soft words of love from two of the younger members, each representing a faction; knives, bricks, shotguns and revolvers are occasionally brought into play, but to date, nothing of a serious nature has occurred, other than an old-fashioned fist encounter.

The McFeeleys and Cochrels are kin, and that is where the rub comes in. Lon Cochrel, who returned from three years service in the U. S. army in the Philippines, a few months ago, and who by the same token, is the young man who recently figured as a hero in Greenfield, where he saved a little tot's life, and Nellie McFeeley, the girl in the case, are first cousins. They are desperately in love with each other, but the law prohibits them from marrying. The father of the girl has repeatedly tried to break off the liaison between the young people, and even went so far as to try and stop it at the point of a gun, so Cochrel says.

McFeeley and his wife went before Deputy Prosecutor Newbold this morning and endeavored to have the law on the couple for an escape of last Sunday.

McFeeley tells the story: "This young fellow has about run his limit with me and if there is any justice in this country, I'm going to have it. He lickspittled around, and has my little girl—why she's only seventeen—under some influence. Time and again I have run him off, 'cause you know they are own blood first cousins. Last Sunday while we were away, he came along and abducted the girl and took her to the home of his brother John, who lives on the Willard Amos farm, south of town. And they are down there now. Is this thing right? No sircce, Bob!"

"The Lord knows I haint done right in the last few years, but it's just on account of worry over that girl that I took to drinking. She's dragging me down to perdition with her. I ain't making any excuses pardner, but its an honest fact."

"My wife is as good a Christian woman as ever lived, and she ain't deserving of all of this. If the law don't take a hand in this matter, that scoundrel Cochrel will have to answer to me. He's got to give me my girl back. I love her, but that flyup has sort of poisoned her agin me. There is times that I wish we were all dead—but we ain't and we've got to make the best of it."

"He's given her whisky time and agin, and that's agin the law, I reckon, 'cause I had to pay a fine for that very same thing. Some one told me I ought to have her sent to some institution. I'd like to do anything to fix matters up, but my hands is tied."

Then a tear came into the eyes of the father, whose heart was bleeding, and he spoke of the sad condition the girl is now in, declaring that she was encoined.

"I'd have them marry," he continued, "but the law is agin it. My good wife went out there in the country yesterday and instead of getting our little girl, she got a cussing from that infernal scallawag. Surely, there is a way out of this."

Mr. and Mrs. McFeeley spent some two hours in consultation with Deputy Prosecutor Newbold this morning, and it is likely that the case will be given fresh air treatment at the next session of the grand jury.

WIRE FENCE BUILT ACROSS A STREET

But Mayor Cowing Had it Removed Immediately—Put up by C. H. & D.

In the early hours this morning the C. H. & D. railroad company had a force of men out at work and a wire fence was constructed across Arthur street at the C. H. & D. crossing.

When Mayor Cowing heard of it he sent a force of men to the scene shortly before noon, and the fence was quietly and carefully taken down and rolled up in order to re-open the street.

The mayor said this afternoon, if any one was caught putting up another fence or obstructing the street in any way, the guilty parties would be immediately arrested for same. It will be the railroad company's next move on the checkerboard—if there be a move made.

TO INVESTIGATE OLDHAM SUICIDE

Deputy Prosecutor Newbold
Sceptical — Advances
Several Theories

CAUSE OF THE RASH ACT

Is a Puzzler, and Official Would Try and Throw Some Light on the Case

The Oldham suicide continues a live topic of conversation among the best citizens of this community, and many of them are demanding that an investigation be made. It might prove fruitless, and be a source of annoyance and the cause of reopening the wounds of sorrow to the members of the decedent's household, but nevertheless if anyone had a finger directly or indirectly in his death the blood of the suicide is on their hands and justice should not be cheated.

Deputy Prosecutor Will L. Newbold contemplates making an investigation, if there are any developments or if the least clue presents itself and warrants an investigation. Mr. Newbold takes the suicide theory with a grain of salt and says that while he is not yet in a position to make any statement, nevertheless he is sceptical. He paid a quiet visit to the Oldham farm Sunday and went over the grounds. Mr. Newbold says that it would have been possible for some one to murder the man, and lay him in the position he was found, making it appear as suicide. Dealing in theories, he said that it was possible that Mr. Oldham had paid a visit to a Connersville banking institution, and that he might have returned with a large amount of money in his possession, and that he was followed to his farm and afterwards killed. Or if he had an enemy, they could well know that he went into the field each evening alone, to look after the stock, and knowing this, they could have easily planned and carried out the murder. Mr. Newbold advanced several theories, all conjectures, of course, that would give a lead to an investigation.

But many people scout the murder theory, and not a few are of the opinion that some one had to do with his untimely death. If there is any blackmailing back of it all, as Deputy Prosecutor Newbold feels that there might have been, then the party or parties who were guilty of such work, were instrumental in causing his death. A proper investigation would lift the cloud, and as fellow citizens and brother to brother, we owe that much to society.

It is known that Mr. Oldham had some few enemies, and one of his most intimate friends says that he was mortally and physically afraid at all times. If he happened to be standing about when two men engaged in an argument he would turn and walk away, and if a fight or altercation started he would always hurry away; a spirit of fear seemed to pervade his every thought.

To a very intimate friend in the past few months, he has talked of suicide, but he declared that he was afraid to die. It is understood that he had inquired of a physician on the better and easier way to die, and that he had finally decided to end his existence by drowning. He dreaded death, and often spoke of that fact, saying that he wished it was all over.

To close friends he confided that he intended to end all, for he feared exposure, intimating that he had been threatened with such, and that he did not have the courage to face it. He said that he had lived in deadly fear of several parties for sometime and that death was the only avenue of escape, yet he could not bolster up the nerve to die at his own hand.

If the names of anyone have been dragged into this case without cause, an investigation will turn that finger of suspicion from them, and in the end, will not harm anyone.

One thing is sure, Mr. Oldham did not make up his mind until late Friday afternoon to commit suicide, for he had planned business engagements for the following day, and why he should suddenly determine on the matter is now the question for the investigators to solve.

When a human life is taken, the public demands to know the reason why. There must have been a motive that actuated suicide. There was a motive for suicide. And now it remains for the proper officials to institute an investigation.

WHITE BLACK BERRIES

Delicious Cream Colored Fruit
From Franklin County

The blackberry venders from Franklin county are numerous on our streets in the early morning with fresh berries which bespeak quite a large crop in the woods and fields in our sister county. The berries as a rule are of a good plump variety this year and the hills of Franklin county are literally "black" with them.

Occasionally a few choice "white" blackberries are seen in the wagons of the venders, but these are scarce as there are only a few places in that county where they grow. These berries are cream colored and very sweet and are only used with cream and sugar after the order strawberries are prepared.

Dean, $600, and the remainder of the estate to be equally divided among Arthur B. and Albert Irvin and Mary A. Dean.

"JERSEY LIGHT" GOOD FOR A HORSE

Animal Struck by Lightning Was Soon Brought Back to Life

During the antics of lightning in a heavy shower which passed over Morristown, a bolt descended upon the barn of John F. Lyons, and set fire to the building. Waves of flames were rolling out of the roof when the local firemen arrived. The barn door was burst open and a horse lay in the stall, to all appearances dead. He was pulled out, however, by the use of fire hooks and ropes.

A veterinary felt the animal's pulse, pronounced the horse dead and gave as the cause shock from lightning. But one of the town firemen, who carried with him a bottle of whisky, commonly known as "Jersey lightning," opened the animal's mouth and gave it the contents of the bottle, which was half full.

To the astonishment of the crowd the horse got up, neighed a little, and backing up to the hose cart, kicked it over. The remedy is recommended in all cases of lightning as the particular brand is said to be a counter irritant.

WATSON TO SAY THE WORD SOON

His Position in the Gubernatorial Race Will be Known
Next Week

A FORMIDABLE CANDIDATE

"Uncle Joe" Cannon Says Watson Would Shine Any Place
You Put Him

For the past few months there has been a strong call all over the State for James E. Watson to make the race for governor. The distinguished congressman has, to use a bucolic expression, been "up a tree" on the matter, and undecided as to the best course to pursue. At the National House of Representatives, the handle of the gavel of that august body was pointing towards him, prominent places on the committees that do things await him, and a big voice in national affairs was his at Washington.

On the other hand, the governorship holds out some very tempting morsels. It is nothing to be sneezed at—the executive chair of Indiana. For a man of the Watson type, who is always up and doing, it would probably be a stepping stone to the United States Senate, and a seat in that body is the place Mr. Watson is peculiarly fitted for. He has all the qualifications for a statesman of the highest rank, from the executive ability to the master art of giving expression to his views.

By the end of next week—the time has been extended on account of other pressing business, and on account of there not being any immediate necessity for an expression—Mr. Watson will decide in the matter, whether he will make the race for the Governorship or whether he will let that golden opportunity go by the boards, with other and better things in view.

For weeks he has listened to the counsel of friends, and they are about evenly divided in the opinions.

When asked about the matter recently, Speaker "Uncle Joe" Cannon said: "Well, he couldn't hardly make a mistake either way. That man Watson will shine wherever you put him. It's in him for he was born to be a leader and a great man. While Watson has been 'up a tree,' yet he has had his ear to the ground, and he has been in public life too long to make any serious mistake, occasioned by the rumbling of the plaudits or the censure of the people."

Tomorrow, Mr. Watson speaks at a Red Men's Pow Wow at Attica. O. C. Norris, of this city will accompany him to the meeting. On Friday of this week, the Congressman will address a big meeting at Wolf Lake in DeKalb county, in the northeastern corner of the State.

MISSING FOR MONTHS

Detectives Have Been Searching

Stephen Karr, of Fountaintown, has been missing from his home for several months, and it developed yesterday that the detectives of the Bankers' Association has been searching for him since last March. It is said that the name of Karr's father-in-law, James M. Amara, was forged to a check for about $800. A search of these papers, however, failed to disclose the child's whereabouts.

EAST HAVEN IS NOW CROWDED

And ;Small Appropriation Would Releive This Deplorable Condition

IN THIS ENTIRE DISTRICT

Every County Have Charges Awaiting Admission to the Richmond Asylum

The following from the Richmond Palladium is of interest all over eastern Indiana:

Since the announcement was made some time ago that an appropriation for two new wards at East Haven would be asked of the next legislature that the crowded condition at the institution might be corrected, the eastern Indiana press has taken up the agitation with renewed vigor and is pointing out the distressing fact that each county has far more than its individual allotment in the East Haven hospital. Not one county in the district from which the hospital takes its patients has fewer than the allotment, while the majority have from ten to fifteen more patients than the number they are supposed to send the hospital.

Insanity is growing among the people of the country, but the opinion prevails that it is merely in proportion to the gain in population and if the accommodations were once made ample they would continue so.

Since the situation in the eastern Indiana district has become so alarming, the conditions have been studied more closely and several startling conditions have been exposed.

It has been said in the past few days that the insane patients in the county jail can never receive proper attention. No matter how much care the sheriff may take of his insane or epileptic prisoners, he cannot care for them as they should be, for the simple reason that he is not experienced. The food considered one of the chief requisites for the recovery of an insane person is never what it should be, still the sheriffs do their best. With an appropriation of several thousand dollars, two wards, one for men and the other for women, could be constructed, which would place the eastern district in position to care for its afflicted ones in the best possible manner and insane jail prisoners would be a thing of the past.

HOME COMING WEEK

Cambridge City Will Have a Gala Week of it

The Business Men's Association and Citizens of Cambridge City, Ind., are in the midst of active preparations for the annual free fair and home-coming, which will be held September 16 to 21. The enterprise is not designed as a money making one, as everything in connection with the fair is to be absolutely free—business men of the town contributing the premiums and expense. There will be no entrance fees to pay and no rentals for exhibit stalls will be charged. The home coming reception will be on Wednesday afternoon, the alumni meeting and class reunions on Wednesday and Thursday mornings, the industrial parade on Thursday afternoon and the fraternal parade on Friday afternoon. This is no street fair, but a purely agricultural and stock exhibit in connection with "old home week." Professional exhibits are barred.

FIGHT OVER THEIR WIVES

Injured Man Was Thought to be in a Serious Condition
For a Time

Will Cavanaugh attacked Frank Stevens last night in front of the Nickelo theatre in Carthage with a heavy piece of a pitch fork handle, and before the men could be separated, Stevens was a mass of bruises and wounds. It was thought for a time his injuries would prove fatal.

The trouble was the culmination of an altercation between the wives of the two men, it is said, Cavanaugh claiming that Stevens' better half had made some statements that were untrue.

The attack was made without any warning given, and the heavy stick was broken in three pieces over Stevens' head. A flying piece struck Carl Parish, who was standing by, and bruised him on the breast.

Cavanaugh was arrested, charged with assault and battery with intent to kill, and will be given a hearing in Squire Benjamin's court this evening at six o'clock. Both men work at the strawboard works.

LAST OF A FAMILY OF TWENTY ONE

Father of Seventeen Children Who Died Last Night Survived by one Child

Jehu Perkins, who was widely known throughout this county as "Boss," died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. John Finley, at Greenfield, yesterday evening at the ripe old age of 87 years. Death was due to the infirmities of old age.

Mr. Perkins was of a family of twenty-one brothers and sisters, and was the father of seventeen children. He has seen all of them buried except his daughter, at whose home he succumbed.

Deceased was born and reared at Perkins Corner in Noble township, and was the oldest native born citizen of that township, and one of the oldest in the county.

He has lived in Noble township all his life until recently when he went to live with his daughter in Greenfield.

Jehu Perkins, Sr., father of the decedent, was truly one of the pioneers of Indiana. On the Perkins farm in Noble township was erected the first mill, horse and water power, the first tavern, distillery and store.

In politics Mr. Perkins was a Republican, and he leaves a host of mourning friends throughout all of Rush county. John Finley, rural route carrier, is a grandson of the deceased.

The funeral services and burial will occur at Pleasant Run tomorrow.

WILL MAKE STUDY OF RESCUE WORK

Rushville Women Who Established Industrial School Here
Go to Indianapolis

The Industrial School established in this city last fall by Mrs. A. L. Stewart and Mrs. T. W. Betker, has grown to such proportions that an additional teacher or two will be needed when the work is again taken up next month. The school is conducted in the Salvation Army church on South Pearl street each Saturday afternoon, and here many young girls are taught to sew and make themselves generally useful about the home.

Mrs. Betker and Mrs. Stewart will visit the Rescue Mission in Indianapolis in a few days to make a study of the industrial work on a larger scale.

IN GREAT DEMAND

Calls Upon the Vice President for Speeches From All Sections.

Indianapolis, Ind., August 20.—Vice President Fairbanks has accepted an invitation to deliver an address at the Texas State Fair grounds at Dallas, on October 30. The promoters of the fair say that Texas never has been honored by a visit of any vice president of the United States, and the coming of Mr. Fairbanks is looked forward to as an affair of great interest. The vice president has promised to devote two days to the Kentucky state campaign, and will speak Oct. 25 and 26 in the Bluegrass State in behalf of the Republican state ticket. It is probable that a special train will be provided in order that he may fill as many engagements as possible.

Attaches of the health board and the police court have made the unwelcome discovery that under the new pure food law enacted by the late legislature no one can be arrested for selling impure meats unless a sample is displayed to the police judge or some justice of the peace, who shall issue an affidavit for the arrest of the offending dealer. This phase of the law promises to result in all kinds of trouble, but the local health officers are determined to enforce it. Dr. C. F. Stout, city meat inspector, pursued Judge Whallon of the police court around town for several hours before he placed in his hands a piece of bad meat obtained at one of the city market stands. Dr. Stout visited the Columbia and Marion clubs in hopes of finding Judge Whallon there. He walked boldly into those palatial quarters carrying the meat, the stench from which caused the members to beat a retreat. One whiff was sufficient to cause Judge Whallon to admit that there was occasion for prosecution. "That's awful," he exclaimed. "Take it away." Dr. Stout has placed the meat in the city laboratory and will use it in the trial against the offending dealer. The city health officers recently raided the meat markets and obtained a wagon load of unwholesome meat, but no prosecutions were possible because none of it was brought beneath the judicial eye of the police judge.

Notice has been given the various railroad companies in Indiana that the state railroad commission will begin a hearing Sept. 27 as to the freight rates on gravel. Many complaints have been made lately to the commission that the rates on gravel are excessive. The commission has been informed that the freight rates are retarding the extension of gravel roads, as many townships are unable to pay them. Gravel has given out in many localities that now have to ship it for use on their roads.

It is said that some commission companies here whose shipments were delayed by reason of the telegraphers' strike, are preparing to sue the telegraph companies for damages. There are said to be several carloads of perishable fruits in the railroad yards here that commission men didn't know had been shipped to them, as the messages announcing the shipments did not arrive until two or three days after the freight reached here.

Traders Take Encouragement.
New York, Aug. 20.—In the face of many misgivings Monday's stock market opened with some manifestations of strength. Price movements were decidedly irregular and hesitating, however, and trading was in much smaller volume. Events of the day were for the most part encouraging. The better feeling had its origin in the changed technical conditions which in turn seemed to be based largely on the belief that the recent drastic liquidation had come to a halt.

He Seeks to Enjoin Leading Labor Unions of the Country From Engaging in Any Boycott.

Washington, Aug. 20.—A significant legal action has been begun in the supreme court of the District of Columbia by James VanCleave, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, to enjoin Samuel Gompers, John Mitchell and other officers of the American Federation of Labor and several of its subsidiary organizations, from using the boycott and so-called "unfair list."

Mr. VanCleave institutes the suit in his individual capacity as head of a large manufacturing company in St. Louis, whose products are alleged to have been declared unfair by the labor unions, but the significance of the action lies in its being a test case wherein Mr. VanCleave, as head of the Manufacturers' association, seeks to permanently enjoin organized labor from using the "unfair" or "we don't patronize" lists in case of fights against firms and individuals.

The papers were filed here in order that personal service might be immediately obtained against a large number of the labor leaders named in the complaint, who are in Washington in attendance upon a general conference.

The complainant is the Bucks Stove and Range company of St. Louis. The plaintiff asks that the defendants be enjoined on nine special points, first alleging a conspiracy unlawfully to injure its business. These points are as follows:

From in any manner carrying on a conspiracy to restrain and destroy the business of the plaintiffs from agreeing or combining to interfere in any manner with the business of the plaintiff or any other persons, firm or corporation.

From boycotting or to boycott or threatening to boycott the plaintiff or the plaintiffs' business or attempting to interfere with the regular operation or shipment, sale or trade in its goods, or from aiding or abetting such boycott; from printing, publishing or distributing through the mails any copies of the "American Federationist" which is the organ of the American Federation of Labor, which contains the name of the plaintiff corporation under the "we don't patronize" or "unfair" lists, or which contains any statement that the plaintiff is or has been unfair, or from publishing or circulating in any way in pursuance of the alleged conspiracy, in writing or any statement to the injury of the product of the plaintiff or dealers or the public that the plaintiff's factory has been boycotted, and that its goods should not be dealt in, or for the purpose of forcing any dealer or person not to purchase the plaintiff's product.

From threatening or intimidating the customers of the plaintiff or from doing any act in aid of the conspiracy or combination alleged.

From giving any orders or directions to committees, associations, of floors, agents or others for the performance of any acts or threats which would impede, obstruct or interfere with the conduct of the plaintiff's business.

From carrying on the alleged conspiracy to restrain and prevent the plaintiff from conducting his proper business in any other states or territories of the Union, and from doing any of the acts or using any of the means in the complaint for the purpose.

The complaint then goes on to state that the American Federation of Labor has repeatedly declared boycotts against the business or products of the customers of numerous individuals and concerns, and has actively prosecuted them by using its combined power for that purpose to wage destructive attacks upon any person or business "under its ban," and that this power is now being directed maliciously against the business of the plaintiff.

The steps leading up to this action are set forth in the complaint to be the outcome of a strike. According to the complaint, Aug. 29, 1906, without previous notice the members of the Metal Polishers' Union No. 13 of St. Louis, in the employ of the stove company, struck in a body and without notice to or conference with the company, or waiting for an adjustment of grievances, which is set forth to have been in violation of an agreement between the International Metal Polishers' and Stove Founders' National Defense association, of which the Bucks company is a member, and under which all differences have for fourteen years been successfully adjusted by a conference committee.

On the failure of the strike, the International Union of Metal Polishers declared a boycott against the Bucks company and its product, inserted the company's name in its "unfair" list, and published it in the union paper, the Journal. The local union No. 13 also joined in the boycott and procured its endorsement by the Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis and the Metal Trades Council, also of St. Louis, both subordinate unions of the American Federation.

In November, 1906, at the annual convention of the American Federation in Minneapolis, the products of the company were placed on the "we don't patronize" list of the Federation and was published in this list in the American Federationist in the June, July and August, 1907, issues.

The complaint says the Federation has been "diminished and in many ways injured" by the company's trade

The sweeping nature of this action is indicated in a partial list of national and international unions and state federations that will be directly affected if the injunction is granted, which contains 173 names of organizations.

MONUMENT TO PILGRIMS

President Present at Cornerstone Laying Today.

Provincetown, Mass., Aug. 20.—The tip end of Cape Cod is thronged with visitors today attracted by the program for the laying of the cornerstone of the Cape Cod Pilgrim Memorial monument in the presence of President Roosevelt. The monument will rise from Town Hill, the highest point of land north of the highlands of the cape, to a height of 250 feet and will be one of the most conspicuous landmarks on the Atlantic.

In the harbor are anchored eight United States warships, arranged in two lines, between which this morning the Mayflower, with President Roosevelt on board, steamed, dropping her anchor within gunshot of the place where the original Mayflower first anchored 287 years ago. The monument commemorates the arrival of the old Mayflower, the landing of the first band of Pilgrims and the signing in that historic vessel of the famous compact.

President Roosevelt was welcomed on shore by the town authorities and by Governor Curtis Guild. The president delivered an address at the exercises and was followed by James Bryce, the British ambassador, and Senator Lodge and Representative Loving. The actual laying of the cornerstone was under the direction of the grand lodge of Masons of Massachusetts.

IN EVANGELISTIC WORK

Suspended For Occupying Pulpits Not of His Own Denomination He Works Along Independent Lines.

Action of Trial Committee in 1906 Has Just Been Confirmed by Church Conference.

Bluffton, Ind., Aug. 20.—The Rev. W. G. Moon, formerly of this city but now of Fairmount, was tried before a special session of the Wesleyan Methodist conference trial committee, in September, 1906, on charges of improper conduct, in occupying pulpits not his own without the consent of all concerned. The committee suspended Mr. Moon pending the meeting of the conference and that body, during the meeting last week, after the case had been called and Mr. Moon had failed to respond, resolved that the "membership of Brother Moon be discontinued until he shall make application for reinstatement and promise to harmonize his life and conduct with the discipline and law of the conference." Mr. Moon has declined reinstatement on the terms suggested. He is engaged in evangelistic work along independent lines.

HELD ON SUSPICION

Lafayette Police Make an Arrest in the Summerfield Case.

Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 20.—James Whitinger has confessed to the murder of Clarence Summerfield.

Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 20.—The police are trying to solve the Clarence Summerfield murder mystery. Summerfield died at St. Elizabeth's hospital without uttering a word, lying unconscious from the time he was found in the McCoy woods southeast of the city, Friday evening, till he passed away.

James Whitinger, who was Summerfield's companion on Friday, is suspected by the police, who traced him to Crawfordsville, where he was arrested yesterday afternoon. Summerfield's death was caused by a bullet wound in his brain. The authorities learned that the man who had left Clarksville with Summerfield was Whitinger. They came here intending to take employment at the box-board factory. They went to a boarding-house and arranged for board, saying they would return in the evening. Then they went to a saloon in Main street and drank considerable whisky. Whitinger was considerably older than Summerfield, who was not in the habit of drinking, and who was twenty years old. The authorities are unable to assign a motive for the murder, but are positive that Summerfield did not die by his own hand. It is the general belief that he and Whitinger quarreled in the McCoy woods. From the direction the bullet took it is evident that the murderer was standing and that Summerfield was sitting on the ground when the bullet was fired.

SENT BACK THE KEYS

Dillsboro, Ind., Aug. 20.—There is still no clue to the mysterious disappearance of Fred Ruby, the cashier of the First National bank of this place, who left his home in this city a week ago without telling anyone of his intentions. The keys of the safe were sent to Miss Maggie Hess, assistant cashier, but the postmark on the envelope was illegible, and it is not known from what part of the country they came. The directors have given out the statement that there is no shortage in the bank's funds.

WOMAN'S WONDERFUL VITALITY

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Hettie Zurschmiede, who was shot four times by David Hawkins, who afterward committed suicide, is convalescing at St. Edward's hospital, despite the fact that two bullets passed entirely through her body, although without striking a vital organ, while a third bullet has not been found. She never lost consciousness, and is now able to sit up.

WILL URGE NEW LAWS

Muncie, Ind., Aug. 20.—The annual convention of the Indiana Federation of Labor will be held in this city beginning Sept. 24 and continuing three days. During that meeting the child labor matter will be considered at length and the general assembly will be urged to pass more stringent laws than now on the statute books.

TOO HANDY WITH HIS GUN

Rockport, Ind., Aug. 20.—John Stillwell, night watchman at the Rockport plant, has been placed under bonds for trial in September, accused of shooting and seriously wounding Daniel Wilmot. Stillwell alleges that he was attacked by Wilmot and his friends, and used his revolver in self-defense.

Princeton, Ind., Aug. 20.—Edward Farholz, twenty-two years old, of Evansville, while attempting to get on an Evansville & Terre Haute passenger train here, fell underneath the wheels and suffered the loss of both legs.

Professor E. E. Bogue, head of the department of forestry at the Michigan agricultural college, is dead. He had a national reputation as a forestry expert.

The Press club of Chicago has bought from the University club the eight-story building at 116-118 Dearborn street. The price paid for the property was $150,000.

The National Rifle association hopes at the next congress to secure the passage of a bill permitting the issuing of government rifles and a small quantity of ammunition per man to civilian rifle clubs.

Elijah D. Oldham

The only child of Samuel and Lucinda Oldham, was born in Jackson township, Rush county, Indiana, June 11th, 1848. His father was one of the early pioneers of Rush county, and by indomitable energy, assisted in the later years of his life by his son, accumulated quite a fortune.

He was married to Hannah Newhouse, a daughter of Lewis Newhouse, now of Rushville, Indiana, on March 4th 1869. Their only child, Lydia E. was born August 13th, 1870, who married Frank E. Sample, October 1st, 1890. Two children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Sample, Ray O. and Lewis S.

Elijah D. Oldham died August 16th, 1907, aged fifty-nine years, two months and eleven days.

The early education of Mr. Oldham in school was limited, but from the great book of nature, books of history and current history he filled his mind with useful knowledge. He was an earnest Bible student and was well versed on all questions of theology. He was not a member of any church but was a firm adherent to the doctrines and teachings of the Baptist church and was a liberal contributor to that church.

He managed his large farms successfully, marketing large amounts of stock and grain each year. He was a Republican in politics and was chosen to represent Rush county in the State Legislature in November, 1890, and served in that capacity for two years.

In politics, and in all his business dealings he was an honest man.

We can only say: "Another forest oak has fallen, stricken by mysterious cyclone, driven to death by an unknown and unseen force. Who will, or who can solve this great problem? It is too deep and unfathomable for the short sighted vision of feeble mortals to explain. Let us therefore permit this sad death to rest in peaceful sleep until the shadowy veil that hides the mystic future from mortal eyes shall be torn aside and the dawning of immortality disclose all hidden mysteries. What we do know, however, is that a dutiful son, a kind, devoted and loving husband and father, a friend, true as the needle to the pole, one abounding in charity without ostentation, a man full of patriotism, love of home, a man of peace, of worth, of sterling character, has passed from the shores of time to the great beyond."

A Grand Birthday Surprise

Stuttle, of near Milroy; Mrs. Walter Winship and daughters, Bessie and May, of Knightstown; Mr. and Mrs. Erwin Cook and daughters, Alpha, Elvira and Sylvia; Mr. and Mrs. Will Brown and nephew, Ervin Loyd; Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Andrews and daughters, Hazel and May.

A sumptuous feast was spread, which was heartily enjoyed by all present, after which ice cream and cake was served. All departed at a late hour, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Oline many more years of happiness.

THE LION AND THE MOUSE.

By CHARLES KLEIN.

A Story of American Life Novelized From the Play by ARTHUR HORNBLow.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, BY G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY.

She was so deeply engrossed in her thoughts that she had not noticed a hansom cab which suddenly drew up with a jerk at the curb opposite her bench. A man jumped out. It was Jefferson.

"Hello, Shirley," he cried gayly. "Who would have expected to find you rusticated on a bench here? I pictured you grinding away at home doing literary stunts for the governor." He grinned and then added: "Come for a drive. I want to talk to you."

Shirley demurred. No; she could not spare the time. Yet, she thought to herself, why was not this a good opportunity to explain to Jefferson how he came to find her in his father's library masquerading under another name and also to ask him to secure the letters for her? While she pondered Jefferson insisted, and a few minutes later she found herself sitting beside him in the cab. They started off at a brisk pace, Shirley sitting with her head back, enjoying the strong breeze caused by the rapid motion.

"Now tell me," he said, "what does it all mean? I was so startled at seeing you in the library the other day that I almost betrayed you. How did you come to call on father?"

Briefly Shirley explained everything. She told him how Mr. Ryder had written to her asking her to call and see him and how she had eagerly seized at this last straw in the hope of helping her father. She told him about the letters, explaining how necessary they were for her father's defense and how she had discovered them. Mr. Ryder, she said, had seemed to take a fancy to her and had asked her to remain in the house as his guest while she was compiling his biography, and she had accepted the offer not so much for the amount of money involved as for the splendid opportunity it afforded her to gain possession of the letters.

"So that is the mysterious work you spoke of, to get those letters?" said Jefferson.

"Yes; that is my mission. It was a secret. I couldn't tell you. I couldn't tell any one. Only Judge Stott knows. He is aware I have found them and is hourly expecting to receive them from me. And now," she said, "I want your help."

His only answer was to grasp tighter the hand she had laid in his. She knew that she would not have to explain the nature of the service she wanted. He understood.

"Where are the letters?" he demanded.

"In the left hand drawer of your father's desk," she answered.

He was silent for a few moments, and then he said simply:

"I will get them."

The cab by this time had got as far as Claremont, and from the hill summit they had a splendid view of the broad sweep of the majestic Hudson and the towering walls of the blue palisades. The day was so beautiful and the air so invigorating that Jefferson suggested a ramble along the banks of the river. They could leave the cab at Claremont and drive back to the city later. Shirley was too grateful to him for his promise of co-operation to make any further opposition, and soon they were far away from beaten highways, down on the banks of the historic stream, picking flowers and laughing merrily like two truant children bent on a self made holiday. The places they had reached was just outside the northern boundaries of Harlem, a sylvan spot still unspoiled by the rude invasion of the flat house builder. The land, thickly wooded, sloped down sharply to the water, and the perfect quiet was broken only by the washing of the tiny surf against the river bank and the shrill notes of the birds in the trees.

Although it was late in October, the day was warm, and Shirley soon tired of climbing over bramble entangled verdure. The rich grass underfoot looked cool and inviting, and the natural slope of the ground affording an ideal resting place she sat there, with Jefferson stretched out at her feet, both watching idly the dancing waters of the broad Hudson, spangled with gleams of light, as they swept swiftly by on their journey to the sea.

"Shirley," said Jefferson suddenly. "I suppose you saw that ridiculous story about my alleged engagement to Miss Roberts. I hope you understood that it was done without my consent."

"If I did not guess it, Jeff," she answered, "your assurance would be sufficient. Besides," she added, "what right have I to object?"

"But I want you to have the right," he replied earnestly. "I'm going to stop this Roberts nonsense in a way my father hardly anticipates. I'm just waiting a chance to talk to him. I'll show him the absurdity of announcing me engaged to a girl who is about to elope with his private secretary."

"Elope with the secretary?" exclaimed Shirley.

Jefferson told all about the letter he had found on the staircase and the Hon. Fitzroy Bagley's plans for a runaway marriage with the senator's wealthy daughter.

"It's a godsend to me," he said gleefully. "Their plan is to get married next Wednesday. I'll see my father on Tuesday. I'll put the evidence in his hands, and I don't think," he added grimly, "he'll bother me any more about Miss Roberts."

"So you're not going away now?" said Shirley, smiling down at him.

He sat up and leaned over toward her.

"I can't, Shirley, I simply can't," he replied, his voice trembling. "You are more to me than I dreamed a woman could ever be. I realize it more forcibly every day. There is no use fighting against it. Without you my work, my life, means nothing."

Shirley shook her head and averted her eyes.

"Don't let us speak of that, Jeff," she pleaded gently. "I told you I did not belong to myself while my father was in peril."

"But I must speak of it," he interrupted. "Shirley, you do yourself an injustice as well as me. You are not indifferent to me—I feel that. Then why raise this barrier between us?"

A soft light stole into the girl's eyes. Ah, it was good to feel there was some one to whom she was everything in the world!

"Don't ask me to betray my trust, Jeff," she faltered. "You know I am not indifferent to you—far from it. But I—"

He came closer until his face nearly touched hers.

"I love you—I want you," he murmured feverishly. "Give me the right to claim you before all the world as my future wife!"

Every note of his rich, manly voice, vibrating with impetuous passion, sounded in Shirley's ear like a soft caress. She closed her eyes. A strange feeling of languor was stealing over her; a mysterious thrill passed through her whole body. The eternal, inevitable sex instinct was disturbing for the first time a woman whose life had been singularly free from such influences, putting to flight all the calculations and resolves her cooler judgment had made. The sensuous charm of the place—the distant splash of the water, the singing of the birds, the fragrance of the trees and grass—all these symbols of the joy of life conspired to arouse the love hunger of the woman. Why, after all, should she not know happiness like other women? She had a sacred duty to perform, it was true, but would it be less well done because she declined to stifle the natural leanings of her womanhood? Both her soul and her body called out, "Let this man love you; give yourself to him; he is worthy of your love."

Half unconsciously she listened to his ardent wooing, her eyes shut, as he spoke quickly, passionately, his breath warm upon her cheek.

"Shirley, I offer you all the devotion a man can give a woman. Say the one word that will make me the happiest or the most wretched of men. Yes or no! Only think well before you wreck

"Say you will be my wife!"

my life. I love you—I love you! I will wait for you if need be until the crack of doom. Say—say you will be my wife!"

She opened her eyes. His face was bent close over hers. Their lips almost touched.

"Yes, Jefferson," she murmured, "I do love you!"

His lips met hers in a long, passionate kiss. Her eyes closed, and an ecstatic thrill seemed to convulse her entire being. The birds in the trees overhead sang in more joyful chorus in celebration of the betrothal.

CHAPTER XIV.

IT was nearly 7 o'clock when Shirley got back to Seventy-fourth street. No one saw her come in, and she went direct to her room and after a hasty dinner worked until late into the night on her book to make up for lost time. The events of the afternoon caused her considerable uneasiness. She reproached herself for her weakness and for having yielded so readily to the impulse of the moment. She had said only what was the truth when she admitted she loved Jefferson, but what right had she to dispose of her future while her father's fate was still uncertain? Her conscience troubled her, and when she came to reason it out calmly the more impossible seemed their union from every point of view. How could she become the daughter-in-law of the man who had ruined her own father? The idea was preposterous, and hard as the sacrifice would be Jefferson must be made to see it in that light. Their engagement was the greatest folly. It bound each of them when nothing but unhappiness could possibly come of it. She was sure now that she loved Jefferson. It would be hard to give him up, but there are times and circumstances when duty and principle must prevail over all other considerations, and this she felt was one of them.

The following morning she received a letter from Stott. He was delighted to hear the good news regarding her important discovery, and he urged her to lose no time in securing the letters and forwarding them to Massapequa, when he would immediately go to Washington and lay them before the senate. Documentary evidence of that conclusive nature, he went on to say, would prove of the very highest value in clearing her father's name. He added that the judge and her mother were as well as circumstances would permit and that they were not in the least worried about her protracted absence. Her Aunt Milly had already returned to Europe, and Eudoxia was still threatening to leave daily.

Shirley needed no urging. She quite realized the importance of acting quickly, but it was not easy to get at the letters. The library was usually kept locked when the great man was away, and on the few occasions when access to it was possible the lynx eyed Mr. Bagley was always on guard. Short as had been her stay in the Ryder household Shirley already shared Jefferson's antipathy to the English secretary, whose manner grew more supercilious and overbearing as he drew nearer the date when he expected to run off with one of the richest catches of the season. He had not sought the acquaintance of his employer's biographer since her arrival, and with the exception of a rude stare, had not deigned to notice her, which attitude of haughty indifference was all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the Hon. Fitzroy usually left nothing untended to cultivate a flirtatious intimacy with every attractive female he met. The truth was that what with Mr. Ryder's demands upon his services and his own preparations for his coming matrimonial venture, in which he had so much at stake, he had neither time nor inclination to indulge his customary amorous diversions.

Miss Roberts had called at the house several times, ostensibly to see Mrs. Ryder, and when introduced to Shirley she had condescended to give the latter a supercilious nod. Her conversation was generally of the silly, vacuous sort, concerning chiefly new dresses or bonnets, and Shirley at once read her character—frivolous, amusement loving, empty headed, irresponsible—just the kind of girl to do something foolish without weighing the consequences. After chatting a few moments with Mrs. Ryder she would usually vanish, and one day after one of these mysterious disappearances Shirley happened to pass the library and caught sight of her and Mr. Bagley conversing in subdued and eager tones. It was very evident that the elopement scheme was fast maturing. If the scandal was to be prevented, Jefferson ought to see his father and acquaint him with the facts without delay. It was probable that at the same time he would make an effort to secure the letters. Meantime she must be patient. Too much hurry might spoil everything.

NEW SUIT FOR 5c.

Any smoker can be suited for 5 cents by going to Hargrove & Mullin's Drug Store and buying a Wadsworth Bros "Chico."

This cigar is not a stogy, a cheroot, or a Porto Rican imitation cigar, but a well made, good size, clear long Havana filler that tastes like tobacco from the first puff right to the end. It smokes free, with a real California perfume fragrance and burns with a solid ash that shows how good a cigar it is.

The "Chico" is warranted to suit any smoker, no matter whether he has been paying 5c, 10c or a higher price. At any rate it is well worth trying, and Hargrove and Mullin, druggists, want all their smoker friends to get the "Chico's" habit.

The entries in all departments of the Indiana State Fair will positively close August 28th.

This year, more than ever before in the history of the fair, the rule requiring all entries to be made at the closing date, will be enforced, for the reason that the fair management will publish a complete catalogue of all the entries made in the horse and cattle classes, and the information of this catalogue must be furnished in the entry blanks in time so that the printer may have it out when the fair opens.

With this catalogue the visitors to the fair will be able to know the name of the exhibitor and the animal he is showing in the new Live Stock Show Pavilion, and the names and addresses of the winners of the prizes. The fair begins September 9th.
